GAME FORMAT

Padel is played in pairs as doubles.

Scoring: Padel uses the same scoring system as tennis.

What's In

The following are allowed:

- The lines are considered in play only during the initial serve.
- Otherwise, they are not a factor in determining the outcome of each point in the game.
- All players are permitted to play a ball off any of the walls on their own side of the court.

What's Out

The opposition wins a point if:

- The ball bounces twice in any area on your side of the court.
- The ball strikes you or your teammate while in play.
- The ball hits the wire fencing, posts, or any other fixture before going over the net or landing on the opponent's court.
- The ball hits the wire fence or walls before bouncing on the opponent's side of the court.

GAME RULES

- Padel matches should be played on a regulation Padel court that is 20m x 10m and is blue, green or terracotta.
- Padel games shall be played between two pairs of players using regulation Padel racquets.
- Before a match, a coin is tossed. The winner gets to choose whether to serve first or which end of the court to start on.
- Each match begins with a serve, which must be done underarm but like tennis must go diagonally into the opponent's court.
- Both teams must attempt to score more points than their opponents.
- The opposition wins a point when any of the following occurs:
  - The ball bounces twice
  - The ball strikes you or a teammate
  - The ball hits the wire fencing or another fixture before going over the net or going into the opponent’s court (classed as out of bounds).
- Matches are made up of 3 sets, with each set made up of six games. The winners of two out of the three sets will be declared winners of the Padel match.
